Intratemporal facial abscess is an uncommon condition. The pathogenesis of the disease is related to the spread of foci of infection through the subarachnoid space via the facial canal. We analyzed the results obtained with both surgical and nonsurgical treatment in nine patients with intratemporal facial abscess. Three patients were treated with antibiotics alone, and six were treated with incision and drainage. The mean duration of follow-up was 24 months for nonsurgical and 27 months for surgical treatment. The most common predisposing conditions were otitis media and periodontal disease. In all patients, facial nerve function was normal before surgery. There was improved nerve function after surgery in all of the patients who underwent surgical treatment. In all nonsurgical patients, nerve function returned to normal spontaneously. This study indicates that nonsurgical treatment of intratemporal facial abscess, if there is no evidence of any neurologic disease, is likely to cure the abscess and prevent the development of facial nerve paralysis. Patients who are treated with antibiotics alone and have infection limited to the intratemporal facial space should be observed for improvement in nerve function. However, facial nerve function should be monitored for signs of deterioration if the infection progresses to involve the temporal bone or to extend into the parotid region Q: SQL Server 2012 Error : Out of Memory I am getting the following error when running an out of memory query on SQL Server 2012. Msg 2014, Level 16, State 14, Line 1 An expression of non-boolean type specified in a context where a condition is expected, near '}'. What I have tried, is to show all memory info on the server including Query cache memory size, and also used the suggestion by setting the parameter "maximum memory set to (MB) value for the database to 900MB" in the services.msc and I have tried to restart the server, also. (the database which the query fails on contains only one table with 5 million rows) A: Just to clarify, 3e33713323
