The new Phalaenopsis plant is a product of a planned breeding program conducted by the inventor in Bleiswijk, The Netherlands. The objective of this breeding program was to create a new Phalaenopsis plant with numerous attractive and large, red, fully recurved flowers, suitable for potted plant production. The new Phalaenopsis plant 'PHALAG01' is a cross-bred product of a cross made in March 2005 between a proprietary female Phalaenopsis plant designated 'UCHINO-KISEKI' (unpatented) and a proprietary male Phalaenopsis plant designated 'KISS-ALLRED' (U.S. Plant Pat. No. 15,874). The female parent (seed parent) plant was grown from a plantlet created by grafting in September 2003 in Bleiswijk, The Netherlands, by the inventor, using 'UCHINO-KISEKI' (unpatented) as the rootstock and 'CYCLONE-WATSUDA' (unpatented) as the scape stock. The cross was made at a greenhouse in Bleiswijk, The Netherlands by hobby growers. The new Phalaenopsis plant 'PHALAG01' was discovered and selected by the
