Desktop UV Index Tool is a desktop application that will enable you to view the latest weather information for any Australian region and also stay up-to-date with the current UV level for the selected area. The UV Index is an indicator of the Sun's UV irradiation and is a natural component of UV radiation, which is also known as solar radiation. The UV Index measures the harmful effects of ultraviolet radiation (commonly abbreviated as UV) on the skin. The higher the UV Index number, the more a person will be exposed to the harmful effects of the Sun's UV radiation. UV radiation is a natural phenomenon and is a component of the electromagnetic spectrum. The Sun emits a number of different wavelengths of UV radiation including the visible light spectrum and the UV portion of the electromagnetic spectrum.

However, the UV radiation that falls on the Earth is a smaller portion than the portion that falls in the visible light spectrum. However, UV radiation damages the skin by causing freckles, sunburn, wrinkles, and the development of skin cancers. So, UV radiation from the Sun can affect health and it is important to protect oneself from UV radiation from the Sun. The UV Index tells people how much of this harmful UV radiation they are exposed to. The UV Index is a measure of the human skin's vulnerability to harmful solar ultraviolet-A radiation. UV Index values are intended to indicate the level of human erythema or sunburn which can result from prolonged exposure to solar radiation, including UVA radiation. The index is a numeric value, based on expert judgment of the probable effects of UV radiation on the skin, that represents an average of the sum of four indices for ultraviolet-A (UVA) radiation and three indices for ultraviolet-B (UVB) radiation. The Meteorological Service of New Zealand (MetService) issues the UV Index and UV Information data forecasts for the New Zealand region every day. The forecast provides a daily UV Index forecast of the UV Index level to be expected at the centre of the forecast area (e.g. Victoria city) on the given date. The forecast also provides an hourly UV Index forecast of the UV Index level to be expected at the centre of the forecast area (e.g. Victoria city) on the given date and hour. The forecasts are given as an integer number from 1 to 10, in multiples of 0.5. As an example, a forecast of UV Index level 5 (for
