Epigenetic regulation of serotonin transporter expression. Serotonin (5-HT) neurotransmission is related to several chronic and acute pathologies. There is a balance in 5-HT function that must be maintained, with 5-HT being protective and/or pathogenic depending on the circumstances. Serotonin transporter (5-HTT) is a crucial molecular determinant in the maintenance of this balance. Indeed, it is the target of therapeutic drugs such as serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs). Accordingly, an in-depth knowledge of 5-HTT regulation is mandatory to fully understand how SSRIs function and how they may fail to act. Numerous studies have demonstrated that environmental factors can induce alterations in the expression of 5-HTT in the brain. These alterations are mainly epigenetic in
