In one of my favorite Photoshop tutorials, "5 Tips to the Perfect Photo," author Julia Perugini shows the five easiest (and most important) tips to Photoshop success. Take some time to master these tips, and, best of all, you can use them to make your life as a photographer and Photoshop artist much easier. Before you start your Photoshop journey, you need to know a couple of things about Photoshop, which is why I include this book. I also have included a very nice overview of Photoshop with simple instructions and instructions in getting started with Photoshop for beginners. You can find the resources for learning Photoshop at the `www.DarkroomTips.com/photoshop`. ## Setting Up Photoshop You have two main places to start to get comfortable with Photoshop. Before you do anything else, I suggest that you turn on the Dock on your Mac. If you have any monitors, you can get them mounted in the middle of your Mac, which will save space and improve your workflow. To get started with Photoshop, you have to open a program called Adobe Photoshop Elements (PSE).

The U.S. Justice Department is seeking to block the sale of U.S. communications company CenturyLink to China's Fosun International for $8.1 billion. According to the FTC complaint, CenturyLink is dominated by former Qwest CEO Joseph P. Nacchio, who resigned as the company's chairman and CEO in 2009. At the time of his resignation, Nacchio was considered one of the most high-profile executives caught up in the largest securities fraud case in U.S. history. The complaint alleges that Nacchio remained on CenturyLink's board even though he was barred from owning more than 2 percent of the company. It also alleges that Nacchio secretly arranged to sell Qwest stock and stock options and engage in insider trading. Earlier this year, Qwest agreed to settle for $44 million a similar FTC claim filed in September 2012. The FTC claims that Nacchio misled investors, analysts and public officials about the accounting problems with Qwest's Long Distance Services business. An attorney for Nacchio did not respond to a request for comment. "In our experience, companies pursuing mergers and acquisitions typically do so with full knowledge of their potential buyers' practices and potential conflicts of interest, and such transactions are often governed by material and complex contractual agreements," said Chris Lakin, deputy director of the FTC's division of corporations. "The FTC's role is to prevent the circumvention of the rules prohibiting corporate insiders from insider trading and to protect investors by ensuring that companies follow the law as they engage in such transactions. "The FTC's complaint alleges that on multiple occasions, Nacchio disclosed to Fosun about inside information he had received about the business and prospects for Qwest." Last November, Fosun International said it would buy CenturyLink from Nacchio's company for $8.2 billion, and it agreed in July to buy the company outright for $8.1 billion. The FTC is now seeking to block the acquisition. In a second FTC complaint filed today, the government alleges that several prominent technology CEOs and founders of companies later acquired by CenturyLink, including Marvell's Sean Maloney and Reed Hastings of Netflix, signed an agreement barring them from purchasing any stock in Qwest or CenturyLink without providing adequate disclosures to investors. The FTC complaint alleges that in its failed attempt to compete with Microsoft, Nacchio repeatedly violated the non-disclosure agreement. According to the complaint

By: Jacob Wheeler It is no wonder that many military history buffs would like to see Apollo 11’s moon landing artifacts on the moon. But getting the bones of the mission out of Earth has been tricky. Some of the original lunar meteorites NASA used to land on the moon, the lunar module, and the Apollo 11 Command and Service Module are all on display at the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, DC. The moon’s orbit around Earth periodically makes some of its surface accessible and keeps some of it permanently buried beneath the moon’s surface. This so-called “lunar highlands” contains layers of maria – basaltic volcanic deposits, possibly of early surface lava flows, that contain pyroclastic rocks, which are high-grade volcanic rocks formed from the eruption of thick and extremely hot lava in volcanic eruptions. The highlands from Apollo 12’s mission in 1969, however, is most interesting because of the wealth of precious moon materials recovered from it. For example, the Apollo 12 moon meteorites contain cupric arsenide, a rare earth element that is used in a number of applications. An Apollo 14 lunar sample and a lunar meteorite from the Apollo 16 mission are the only other places that cupric arsenide has been found. [Read more...] By: Elisa Zarella The Chang’e 3 mission is the most recent lunar sample return mission by China. It was launched on December 10, 2013, from the Xichang Satellite Launch Center, and is scheduled to land on the far side of the Moon on October 31, 2018. It is the first Chinese lunar sample-return mission. [Read more...] By: Micah Scott By April 1969, Dr. Neil Armstrong was assigned to be backup for Apollo 11, his second crewed moonflight. Soon after, a number of theories were produced that gave different reasons for his being a backup. Apparently, Armstrong had become a celebrity. [Read more...] Mankind has never been to the moon and the race to do so has begun. No country is leading the charge, but China is certainly the most notable of these countries. The Chang’e-3 mission will take place in December of 2013 and will return a sample of the moon. [Read more...] By: Justin D. From a distance, the moon may seem like a desolate, desolate place. But,
