"HyperMotion Technology is the most exciting addition to FIFA's gameplay engine since FIFA 11," said Aaron McHardy, senior gameplay lead. "It's pushing the players forward by making them behave and feel like they are truly in the game, on the pitch, in all the most dynamic and important moments of a match." The new technology brings players closer to the ball and into more challenging situations. For example, the players sprint and turn more aggressively when receiving a pass or a tackle, while opponents sprinting at them are easier to pass to or intercept. Players also sprint faster and slower depending on the phase of a match or a player's preference. A more challenging, tactical match will be a welcome addition to the rich and deep gameplay of FIFA, which is more varied and different each year and allows players to find their own preferred style of play. For example, with the new technology, can you spot which player will make the cleanest pass or quickest free kick? Or which player has the game's most accurate free kick or penalty? The new "Keep Talking" mechanic might even encourage more interaction with your teammates, including some cheeky, back-heel assists or confident set-pieces. The improved physics system allows players to take on-field actions at speed, making them much more dynamic. Some of the physics systems were also made entirely re-engineered to deliver a better and more realistic playing experience, alongside refined animations of players interacting with their environment. "There's so much depth in the gameplay we're creating for FIFA - from physics to new ball control, to the flight of the ball or the aeration," says Mary Ma, gameplay director. "We're working to make every movement feel - and play - more realistic. And as for our new engine, we've increased the engine's core capability by 100 million new lines of code. The power and speed of the engine as a whole have been improved dramatically." Building on that, the next instalment of the FIFA engine is designed to take advantage of the latest technologies, including the latest PC and Xbox One features, as well as the upcoming launch of the new PlayStation 4 console. For example, the new Dynamic Motions technology features a new, accurate animation

Fifa 22 Features Key:

- Over 120 new Features including player faces, new camera angles, and ball physics, plus support for new motion capture technology brings FIFA Ultimate Team & FUT MOBILITY to a new level.
- Completely renovated Career mode for both Manager and Player. Players can progress in both career paths, and switch between careers as frequently as they like, within the same league.
- 3D stadiums. You'll be able to create your own stadiums in career mode, and choose to either equip them with Season Tickets, which gives you exclusive Football Leagues and perks, or equip them with Sponsorships, to give your players gifts and a pot of much-needed cash.
- Speaking of sponsorships, Teammate Boosts are back! See how much other players give up for you when you or your teammates score a goal or with a last-ditch tackle or successful dribble. There are also new effects such as Player Positions now counting towards your team total in TOTW Seasonal Cups and other FUT events.
- New Splitscreen control. Vote online in live FUT split-screen games for the best team. Set your friend up against your rival with a 'Request to Play!' Highlight and chat with your friends on the pitch while the match is going on, then get to battling and analyzing the results.
- A smarter cross and shot: Uses new FUT MOBILITY, which allows you to play kicks, crosses, and shots in full 3D with significantly more accuracy. In the lower leagues, kick the ball long and keep hold of it; in the upper leagues, cross the ball early and sweep it into the box.
- New Player Cuts and Physical Styles. Decide how you want to play in Career Mode, from the cerebral cerebral style of Lionel Messi to the athletic control of Zlatan Ibrahimović. Each style you choose from 13 new premium player Physical Styles and completes your Player's overall appearance.
- More skills. More sliders, more magic wands, more passes, more running, and more control over your player on the pitch. And that's just the tip of the iceberg. The next big step in FIFA game development is coming.
- Managers can now create their own tactics using Coaches and Strategies. Create and save your own
