We studied the associations between risk of myocardial ischemia and sudden death and Doppler echocardiography in 95 patients with hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. Ischemia on the electrocardiogram was assessed visually and by several previously validated electrocardiographic criteria. Doppler echocardiography showed a larger-than-normal left ventricular outflow tract gradient in 37 (39%) patients, a larger-than-normal aortic gradient in 59 (63%) patients, and abnormal diastolic flow patterns in 28 (30%) patients. There were 21 deaths, and all had abnormal Doppler echocardiograms or abnormal electrocardiograms. Doppler echocardiography showed a larger-than-normal gradient in the left ventricular outflow tract in 8 (38%) patients who died suddenly during follow-up, compared with only 11 (16%) of the 70 (p = 0.002) patients who remained alive during follow-up. Compared with the 38 (43%) of 89 patients with a normal Doppler

The code I have is: `$('.advanced_items_selectors').on('change', function() { // this is where I need the value of the selector // because once selected it will be used in the form below console.log("this is the value of the selector : " + $(this).val() + " });`

The selector is: A: You can do it like this: `$('.advanced_items_selectors').on('change', function() { var value = $(this).val(); // and other stuff console.log(value); });` Or if you want to save the value in a local variable, then `var value = $(this).val(); // and other stuff` Q: Is it possible to list files with the find command on a mac without using the GUI? I want to run find, and just print the names to the terminal. Is there a way to do this? A: `$ find. -name "test*" > /dev/null` or `$ find. -name test* > /dev/null` A: You can use the `-exec` option to run a command that prints the names it finds on a single file (or 0cc13bf012
