As it turns out, both were on a panel at this year's College Republicans National Convention, discussing what it's like to be a minority at a liberal college. If you aren't familiar with Leroy and Jason, the former is a tenured professor of chemistry at the University of Illinois and the latter is a substitute teacher who graduated from Johns Hopkins with a degree in neuroscience. On the panel were Wendy Montgomery (pro-gun rights, NRA member), Dr. Jillian Jordan (pro-gun control), and Caleb Lyon (pro-gun rights, student). It's always great to get a liberal perspective on things from a pro-gun perspective. I've long been intrigued by the idea that we can be pro-life, pro-gay marriage, pro-war in the former case and anti-war, pro-gay marriage, and pro-peace in the latter.
