HyperMotion Technology will also be used in FIFA's new Quickplay modes, which will let gamers go through training sessions from each club instantly without having to play a full match. This is the cover: FIFA 22 is coming soon. No official date just yet (as usual). Every few months they would put out a trailer, and then the E3 cover. So here it is. Click to embiggen. Pretty neat game. I think I might pick it up before the next one for PC too (not to mention that it will likely be the only way to play it at launch). I've seen some other issues come up, but the gameplay is cool. More like Gran Turismo. Nice graphics. I played this game and the new additions are really nice. I will buy the game now and will be looking forward to the release. But am I the only person who can't believe EA themselves are doing the preorders for the game? It's really funny how the preorder page has a preorder button, but not a post/backorder button. Which means I can only preorder the game once because after I buy it I won't be able to preorder it again. Really weird.

Each year the Town of Thompson produces more than 19,000 tons of organic wastes such as compost, grass clippings, leaves, ashes, food wastes, sawdust, etc., and invests in infrastructure for hauling such materials to a composting site. The combined amount of hauling and composting activities have never been higher, due to the size and number of grass-cutting and tree-cutting operations, and the expansion of greenhouse operations, both of which generate considerable waste. The cost of hauling and composting services is over $100,000.00 per year. The town expects to increase this amount each year as this business grows. The town is seeking a vendor to invest in land, equipment, and to act as an agent to acquire site materials and to serve as a hauler and composting contractor for the town. The Town of Thompson is accepting vendor proposals until 6:00 p.m., Nov. 14, 2014.

Solubilisation of rat brain acetylcholinesterase by a novel amphiphilic compound, DM. Some amphiphilic compounds with an aliphatic side chain attached to a quaternary ammonium were found to be effective solubilisers of rat brain acetylcholinesterase in vitro. The optimum conditions for the reaction, which included concentration of solubiliser, incubation time and temperature, were determined. The values were found to be similar to those for Triton X-100. The optimum concentration of the solubiliser, however, was relatively low at 0.5 mM. The enzyme was solubilised with a faster rate than that of the detergent, suggesting that the solubiliser exerts its solubilising action by affecting the protein. The enzyme has a very low affinity for the solubiliser and is only solubilised by a large excess of the compound. The enzyme becomes more active in the presence of a large excess of the solubiliser, but is inactivated by a small excess. A decrease in the solubiliser concentration enhances the enzyme activity to regain its original level. The solubilising effect is explained in terms of the formation of a cholinesterase-solubiliser complex. The approximate molecular weights of the solubilised and inactive solubiliser-bound enzymes were found to be 66,000 and 116,000, respectively. The molecular
