come across a cool feature in an application that you wanted to use, but was unable to find any easy way to bring it up to the desktop? This might be the case, and the answer may be found here. There are a few special windows hotkeys that are meant for laptops and others that make use of an external monitor. Let me explain this to you. I also tried using the CompactFlash removable disk with the emulator. It won't load the floppy images either. The error was "The file format or the file extension is not supported by this application. All Windows Plug-ins and ActiveX controls are disabled by default. Microsoft Windows cannot use the file or directory." (or something to that effect). I think I'll also try loading it in Mange Makers instead. I booted back into the windows partition and it would not even load my display mode, graphics were just off. I tried running it in safe mode, with the no root account. I tried using an earlier restore point with no luck. I tried running in Compatibility Mode but still no luck. I then decided to do a system restore back to the day before I tried updating. I put on my spare monitor and got it to load display mode. I then tried my display settings again. It said I have an unspecified error in my windows log but did not tell me what that was. I then tried loading an earlier restore point, it did not even run that restore. I started backing up my documents and settings via cloud and got it to boot into safe mode again. I tried running my display mode on the original boot without the system restore. It still would not load my display mode so i then rebooted again and tried the same thing. This time it loaded my display mode.
