"the united states and the dprk (north korea) remain committed to the june 12 singapore summit and remain committed to making progress on the issues raised by president trump and chairman kim jong un at their very first summit," u. state department spokeswoman heather nauert said in a statement. "however, north korea was unable to confirm the date, location, and participants for the second summit," she said. it wasn't immediately clear why the meeting was canceled. the latest summit between president donald trump and north korean leader kim jong un was supposed to take place in singapore on june 12, just as they met in person for the first time. but the meeting did not take place. the last-minute meeting was canceled after the north koreans stopped responding to calls and messages from u. officials. the u. officials said north korea officials were not able to leave the airport for the planned meeting. "unfortunately, we were not able to secure a safe and stable environment in singapore," nauert said. "we are still prepared to hold the summit at a mutually agreeable date and location." the statement comes after vice president mike pence said in a news conference on sunday that "the last thing we want to do is have it be a photo op." "it's also important to recognize what a major, major step this is," he said. "this is the first time we've ever met with north korea at this level and the first time we've ever met with kim jong un." pence said he was "hopeful" the meeting could take place. "the invitation has been sent, the plans are being made, but we have not heard anything back from north korea in the last 24 hours," he said. asked about kim's public statement that the meeting was cancelled, he said, "it's a shame that the north koreans have not been willing to take the opportunity to do what they said they're going to do in the past." trump tweeted late saturday that "everyone here is excited and looking forward to the summit." he also said he was looking forward to a "great relationship" with kim. the president's eldest son, donald trump jr., also said sunday that he was looking forward to the "productive meetings" at the summit. "nothing but respect for chairman kim. he is a very impressive man," trump jr. tweeted. trump told reporters in new jersey on saturday that he didn't want to talk about what he would say if kim jong un brought up denuclearization. "i'm not going to be discussing that," he said. "i can't give you a formula on that. we'll see what happens. it's too early." trump's comments came after north korea's foreign minister, ri yong ho, said in an interview with cbs that his country was willing to give up its nuclear weapons.
