Inform the user about the status of an XMPP connection I need to inform the user about the status of an XMPP connection he is using (online/offline/presence). Is there any way to do it without affecting the user experience? A: The "Client should notify the user about the connection status", which is described in the XEP 0040, is hard to implement: The client should inform the user about the connection status. The client must implement the "Should Notify User About Connection Status" extension point. The user must have a resource connection that is an entity that has a presences property, the client must provide an invitation to the user via the invite() method and the user must accept the invitation. The user must use one of the presence methods, the client must be able to retrieve the user's presence status, and the user must display the presence status. Student Communal Complex The Student Communal Complex (SCC) is the oldest student union building at Simon Fraser University (SFU), and is the university's oldest purpose-built student centre. It is located on Burnaby Mountain and just west of the Burnaby campus. It was built in the early 1960s with the purpose of providing a meeting space for all the various organizations that represent the university students. The building is a member of the Castlegar Building Plan (CBC) group of the National Capital Commission. History The SCC was originally designed in 1959 and construction began in 1960. The building is a complex of many separate buildings interconnected by covered walkways. The main building is f988f36e3a
