The present invention relates to techniques for inspection of objects and, more particularly, to the inspection of objects for surface defects, such as paint defects. Many objects are manufactured from a paint-coated metal material. Inspection of such objects for surface defects can be challenging. For example, thin paint layers on hard surfaces, such as painted metal surfaces of automobiles, could prevent a defect sensor from getting an accurate impression of the painted metal surface. There are a number of conventional defect inspection schemes for detecting defects on metallic objects. Typically, an image of an object is acquired. The image is then compared with a reference image for detecting surface defects and color matching. Although the conventional schemes can identify surface defects, a scanned image used by conventional schemes can be incomplete, which can make it difficult to identify defect occurrences on objects that have been damaged or otherwise altered after being painted. Thus, there is a need for better techniques for inspecting objects for defects.Q: JQuery Mobile Listview menu not appearing when
